

'How To Change The World' is a unit of work completed by the children in the first week of Autumn 1, as part of a wider project aptly named 'The People Project.' This unit of work is designed to teach our children about an array of individuals who have a variety of protected characteristics and aims to give the children aspirational individuals within this curriculum subject who are groundbreaking, inspiring and embody the Langrish values: Ambition, Belonging and Curiosity. The children explore the individual or individuals during a PSHE lesson, learning why they are important to learn about (both their protected characteristics and their personal qualities) and then delve deeper into the history through a history lesson.

Final outcome

Every unit within the People Project has a final outcome, one of these being a book the children's work in entered into, which captures some of the fabulous work the children produced.

For this unit, pupils will produce a 'This Is Your Life' short film (put together by the EARA group), detailing these famous individuals and educating others about them.
